

HEADLIGHTS

Washington law says you need to have your headlights on a half hour after sunset to a half hour before sunrise. However, it might be easier to remember to have your headlights on:

- All the time.
- When it's dark.
- When it's rainy, snowy, foggy, or smoky.

Headlights help you see, but they also help people see you!

Some vehicles have daytime running lights that come on when you start the car. However, daytime running lights aren't as bright as headlights, and they don't activate your taillights.

Make sure all lights are clean, bright, pointing the right direction, and operating properly. If your dashboard shows a "lamp out" symbol, it's time to replace the bulbs.
