

White and yellow lines separating travel lanes or marking the center of the road tell you if traffic is traveling in one or two directions.

Yellow lines separate traffic in opposite directions. White lines separate traffic lanes moving in the same direction.

Shorter dashed white lines mean the lane is ending. You will either need to merge or exit. You can cross dashed lines if it is safe.

Medians divide two or more roadways. They can be open spaces, cement dividers, or 18-inch solid yellow pavement markings with stripes. It's illegal to drive within, over, or across medians.
